Cervena awards restaurateur of the year scholarship

Cervena Venison of New Zealand awarded its first $2,500 "Restaurateur of the Year" scholarship to Anthony Mandriota, a graduate student studying hospitality management at Florida International University's School of Hospitality and Tourism Management. The scholarship was awarded to the student who submitted the best essay on "Meat Trends for 2007" and was judged by the faculty of the FIU hospitality program. Pictured, from left, are scholarship winner Mandriota, Cervena's chef ambassador Brad Farmerie of Public restaurant in New York and Florida International University associate dean Lee Dickson.
